READING PASSAGE

The following passage is taken from a book about the history of the United States. It describes the early years of the nation and the challenges it faced.

The first settlers in the United States were the Pilgrims, who came to the New World in 1620. They were looking for a place where they could practice their religion freely. They found the Massachusetts Bay Colony, which was the first of many colonies that would be founded in the years to come.

The Pilgrims faced many hardships in their new home. They had no money, no tools, and no food. They had to build their own homes and grow their own food. Despite these difficulties, they survived and their colony grew.

Over the years, more and more people came to the United States. They came from all over the world, bringing with them different cultures, languages, and customs. The United States became a melting pot of different peoples.

By the time of the American Revolution, the United States had become a powerful nation. It had a large population, a strong economy, and a government that was based on the principles of liberty and justice for all.
