What The Suicide of 'Lady Singham' Reveals About Sexual Harassment At Workplaces

The suicide of a 28-year-old female Range Forest Officer posted at the Melghat Tiger Reserve in Amravati has yet again brought the issue of workplace sexual harassment to the fore. Dipali Chavan-Mohite, popularly known as 'Lady Singham' for her daring and stringent action against forest mafias, shot herself at her official quarters near the reserve with her service revolver and passed away on Thursday, reported IANS.

Officials said that she had left a purported suicide note in which she detailed the sexual harassment and torture she faced at the hands of an Indian Forest Service (IFS) officer. Amravati police has detained the Deputy Conservator of Forest, Vinod Shivkumar as the four-page suicide note revealed that he allegedly abused his position, indulged in verbal harassment, and made sexual advances against the deceased.

Chavan-Mohite's requests to her superiors to tackle the harassment were ignored. In fact, she was rather subjected to more grueling assignments and torment by Shivkumar. In a profession where she chased people involved in dangerous illegal activity, here it was a man abusing the power differential that eventually made the young officer feel unsafe at her workplace.
